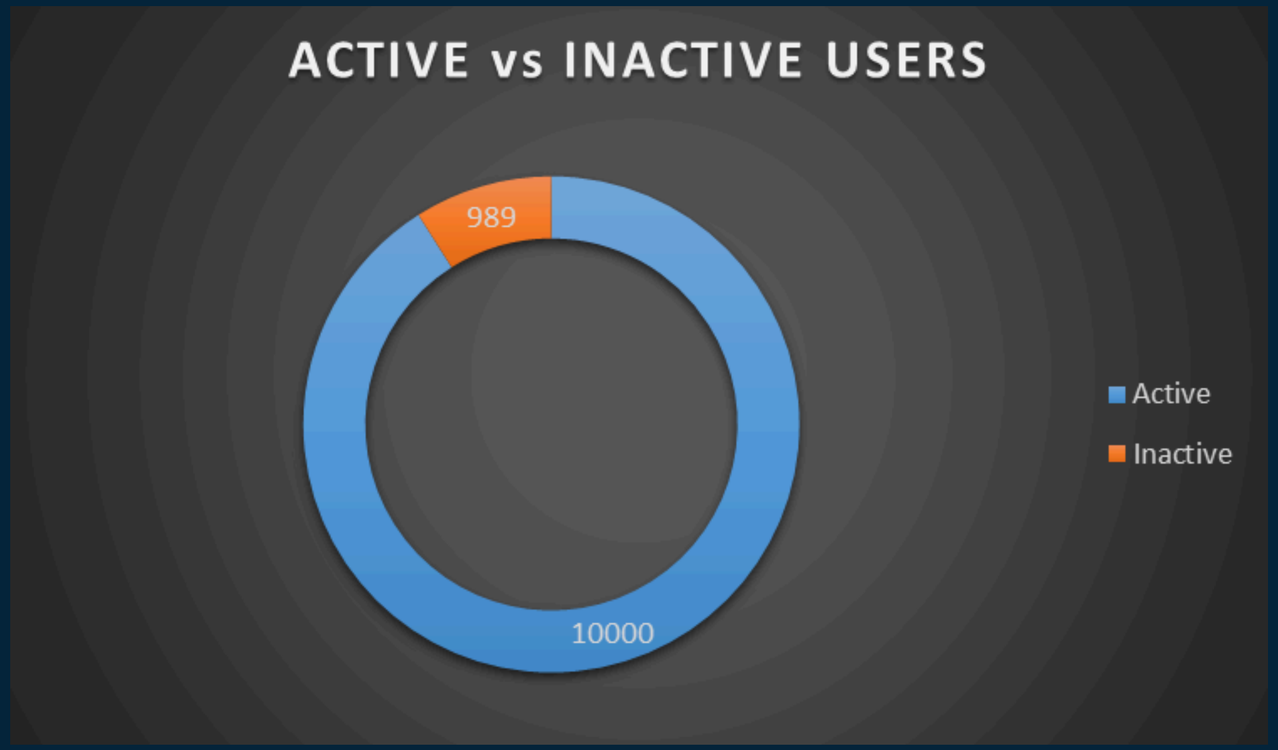
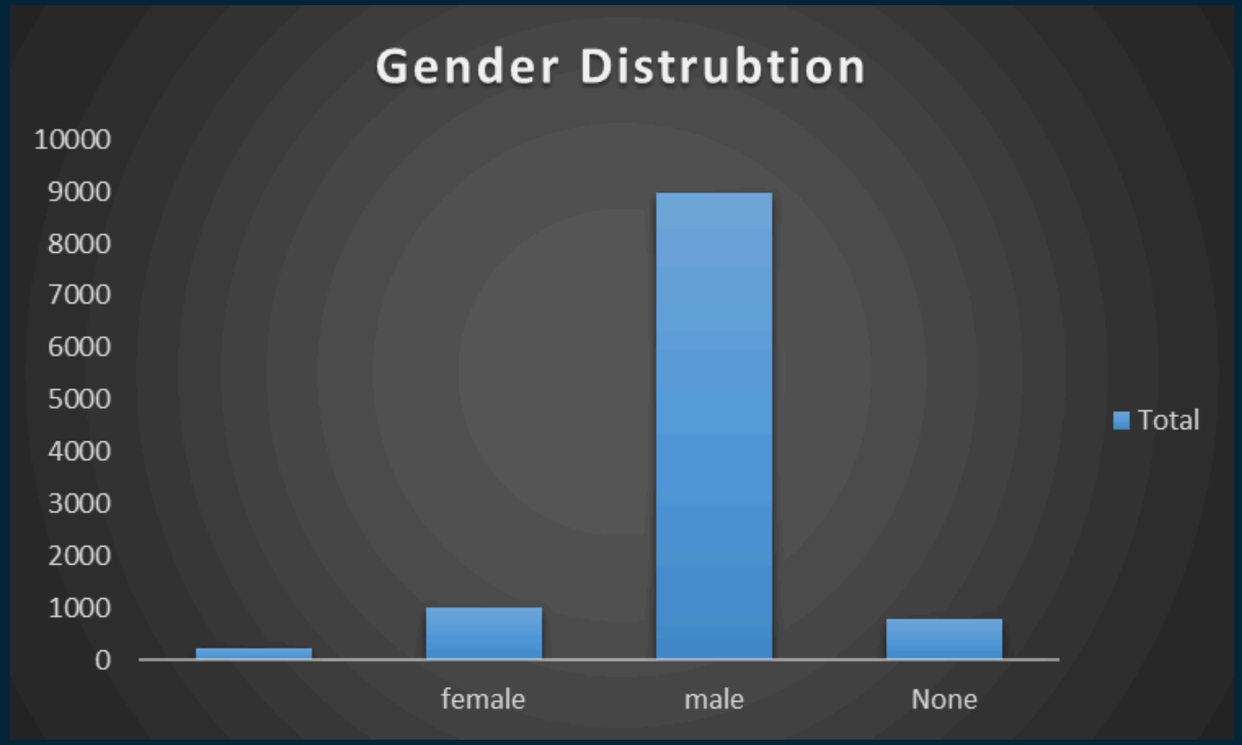
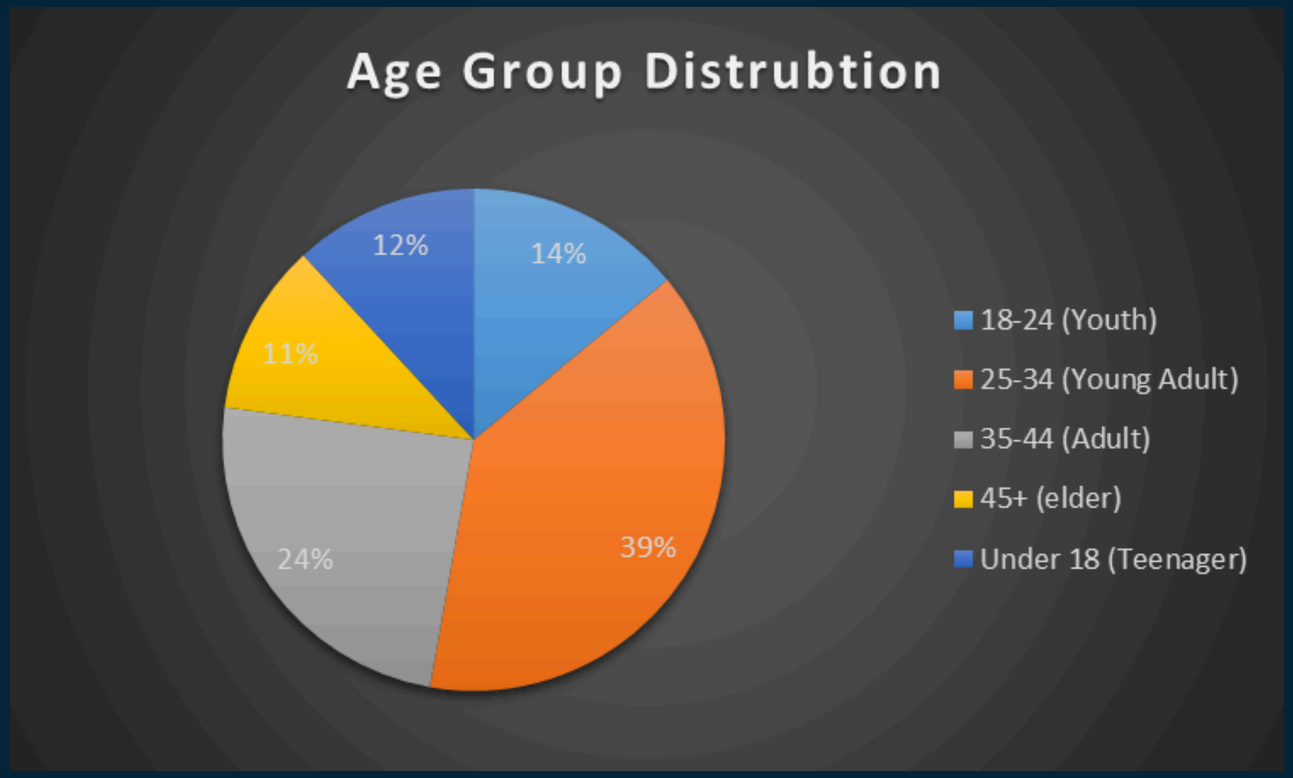
Platform Health & User Profile Overview





The platform is performing well with a 91% active user rate, showing strong retention. The user base is predominantly male (82%), aligning with our sports-focused content. However, 800+ incomplete profiles highlight a gap in data collection that limits personalisation and advertiser targeting.

Who Is Our Audience?



The 25-34 Young Adult segment dominates at 39%, followed by Adults (35-44) at 24%, making working-age adults our core audience. Teenagers (12%) and Youth (14%) represent a growing younger base, while the 45+ Elder group at 11% remains the smallest segment. Content and marketing should continue serving the 25-34 majority, invest in youth-friendly content to secure future loyalty, and explore tailored content for the elder segment to avoid losing that audience entirely

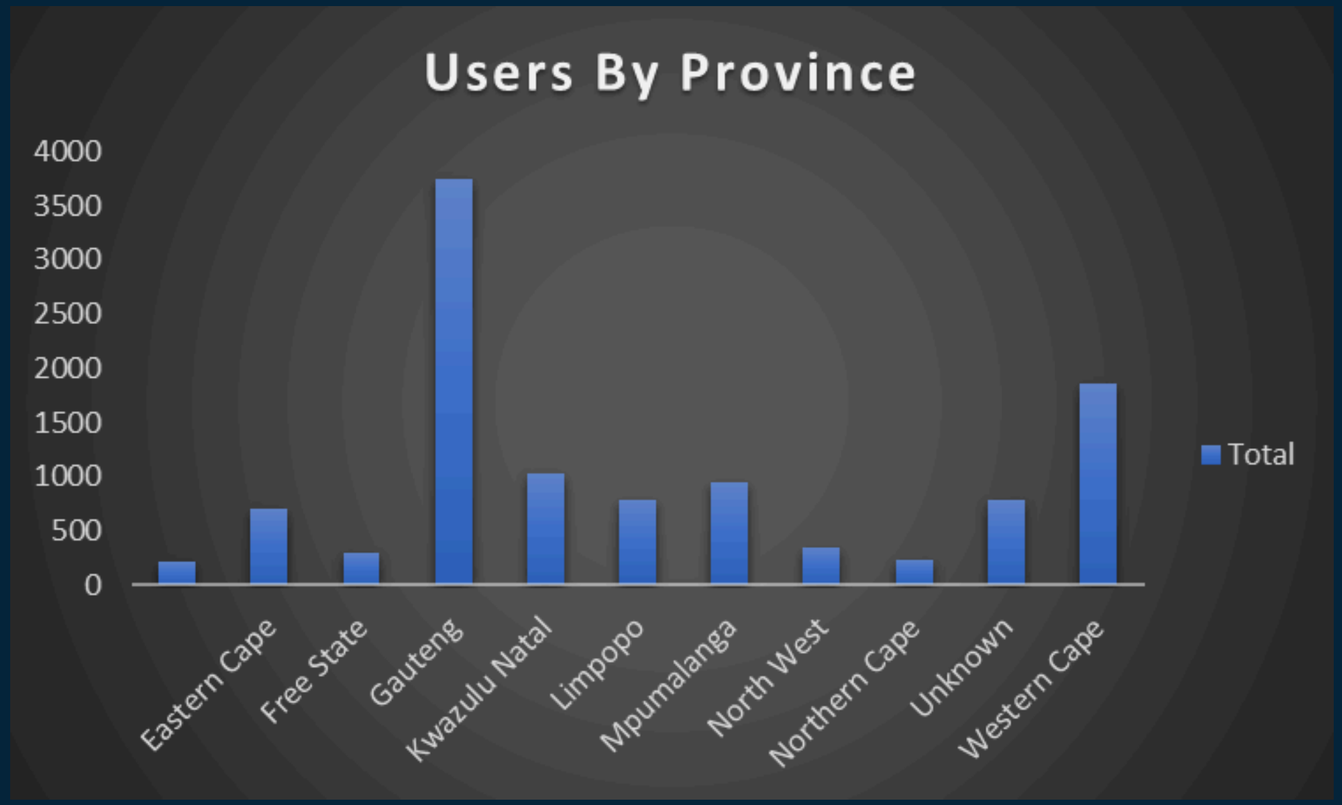
Where Are Our Users Located



Gauteng leads significantly with approximately 3,700 users, followed by Western Cape at 1,850, confirming the platform's strong presence in South Africa's major economic hubs. Provinces like KwaZulu-Natal, Limpopo, and Mpumalanga show moderate uptake, while Eastern Cape, North West, and Northern Cape remain underpenetrated. To drive nationwide growth, the platform should invest in targeted regional marketing, community partnerships, and localized content in indigenous languages such as Zulu, Xhosa, and Sotho to boost adoption and position the platform as truly nationally inclusive.

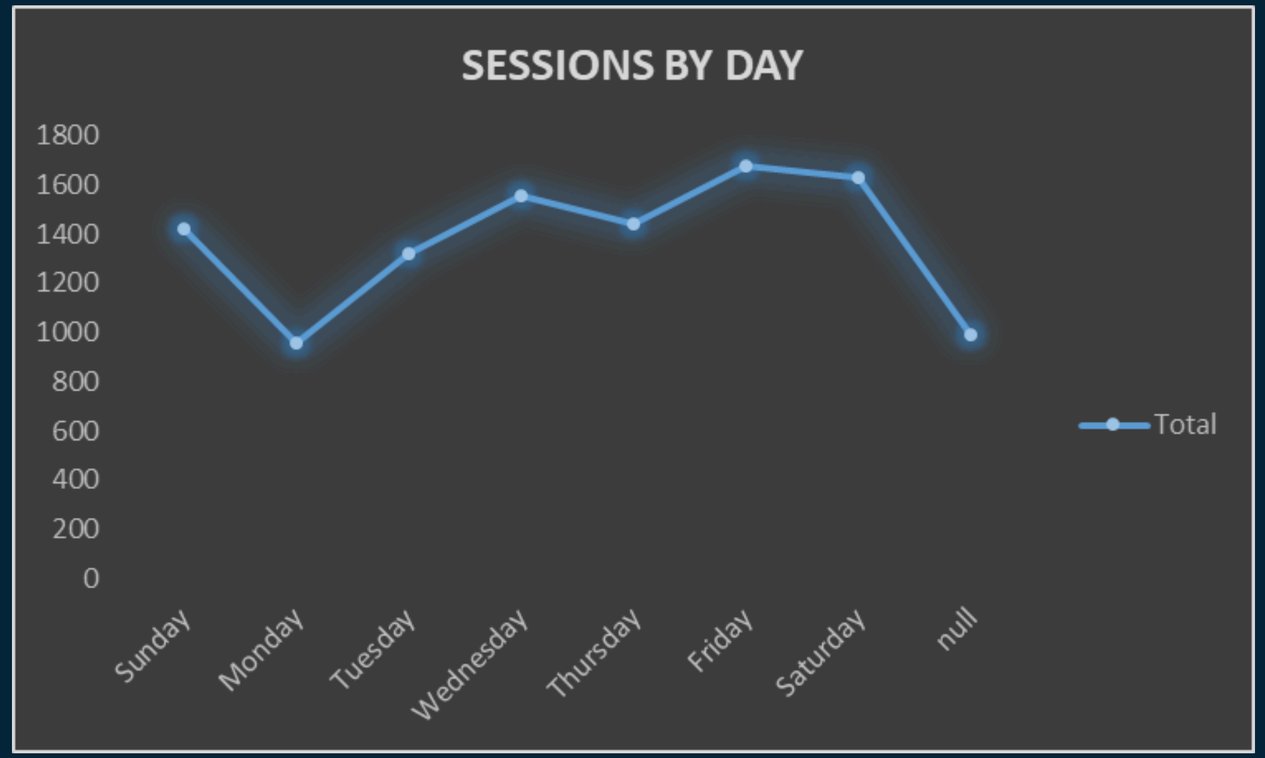
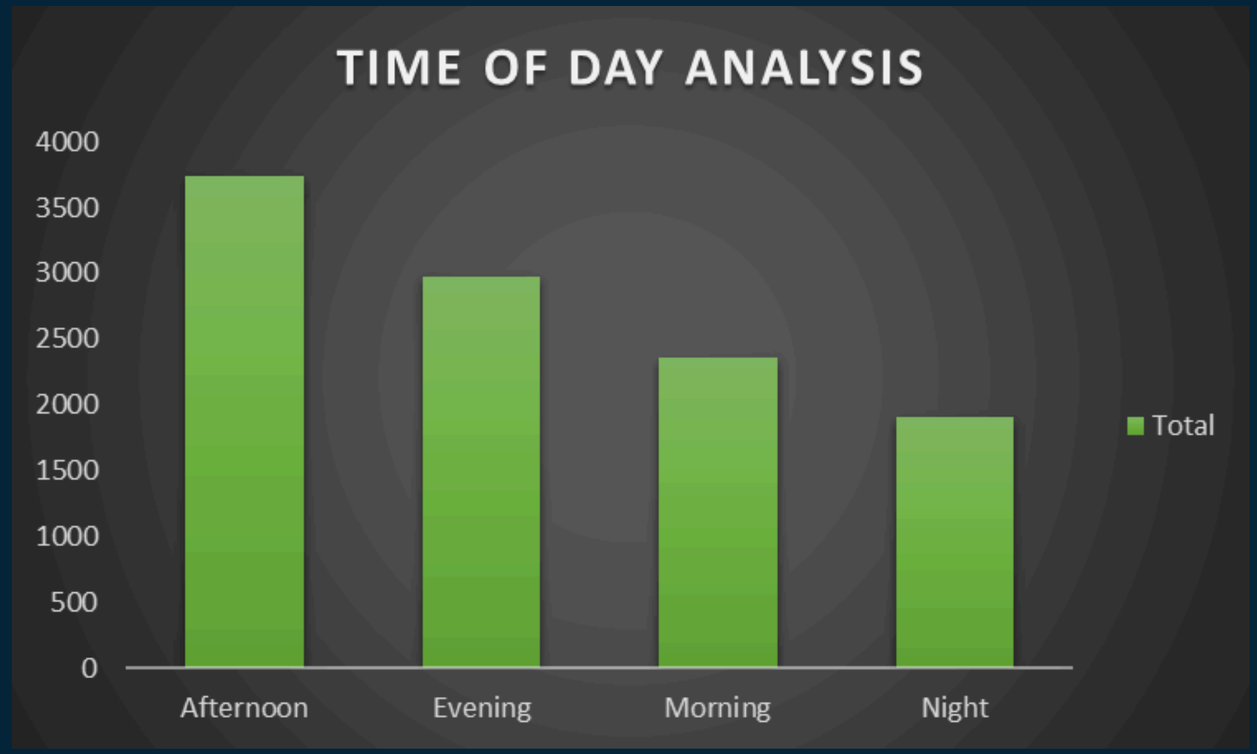
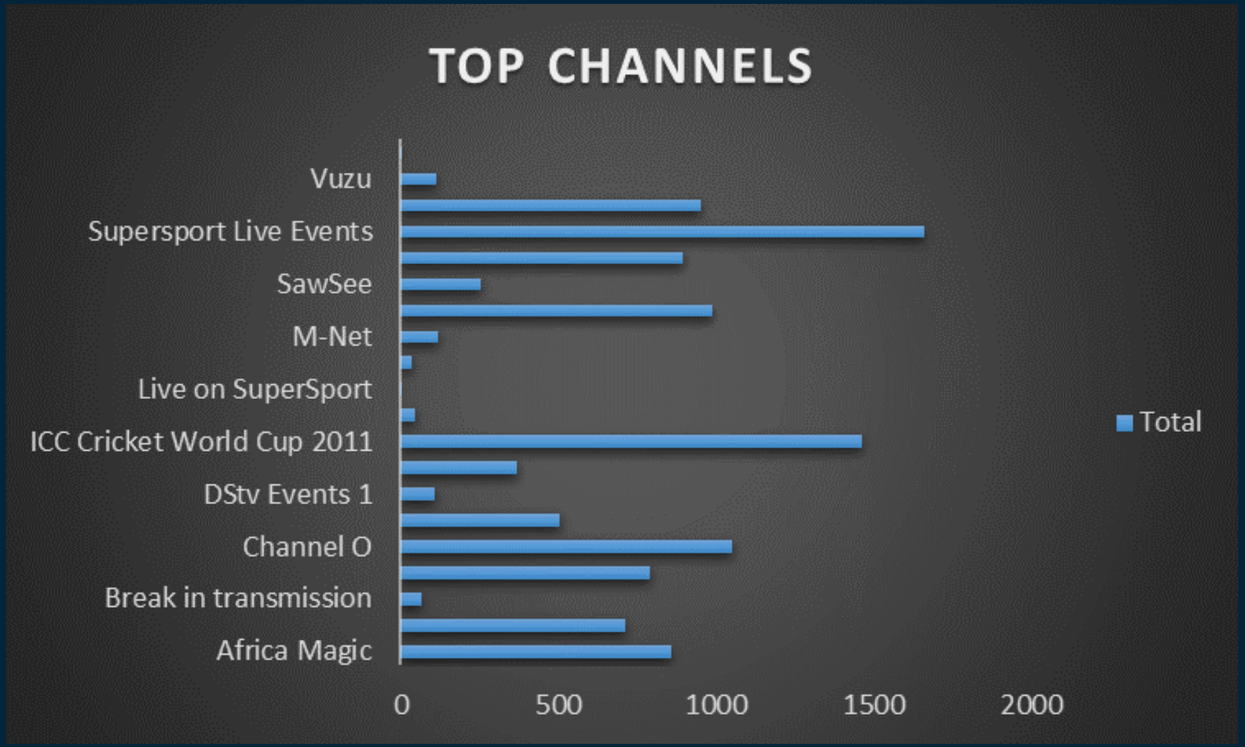
When Do Our Users Watch

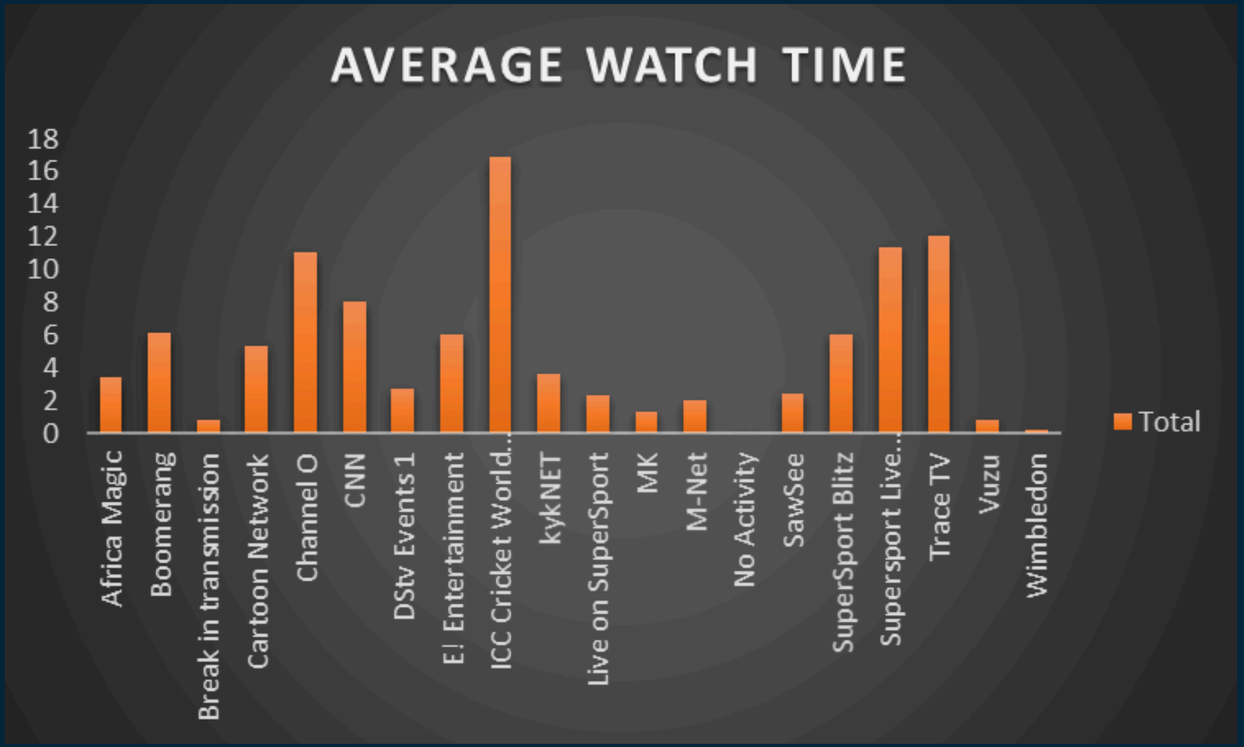




Afternoon is the peak viewing period with approximately 3,700 sessions, followed by Evening at 3,000, while Morning and Night remain lower. Friday and Saturday are the busiest days, with Monday recording the lowest engagement. This pattern strongly suggests users prefer unwinding with content after work and during weekends. The platform should schedule premium content, live events, and major releases on Friday afternoons and weekends to maximise viewership, while offering lighter or catch-up content during mornings and weekdays to maintain consistent daily engagement.

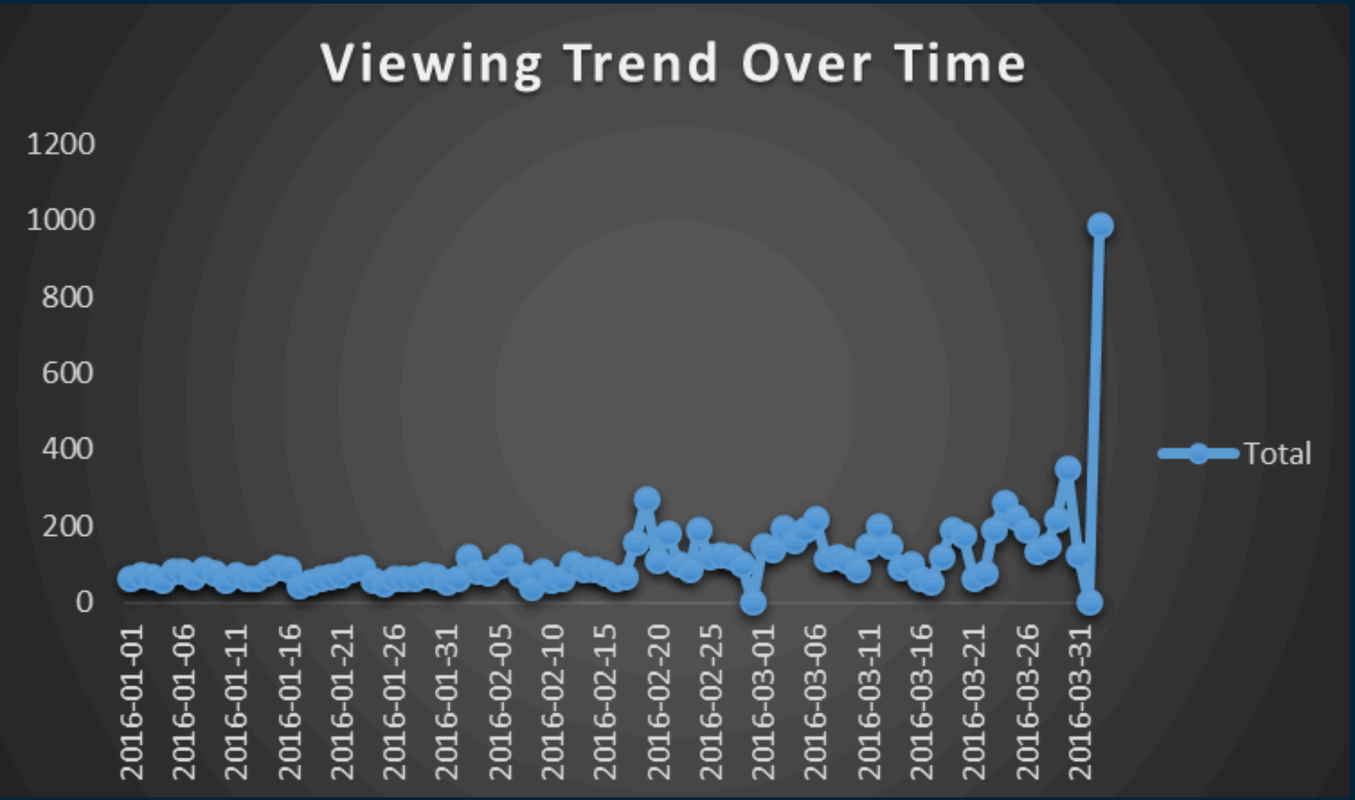
What Are Our Users Watching





SuperSport Live Events dominates in total views at approximately 1,650, confirming sport as the platform's strongest content pillar. However, ICC Cricket World Cup 2011 records the highest average watch time at over 16 minutes, proving that cricket fans are the most deeply engaged audience on the platform. Channel O and Tezos TV also show strong watch times, revealing a significant appetite for music and entertainment content beyond sport. To maximize growth, the platform should invest in securing more live sport and cricket broadcasting rights to retain its most loyal users, while simultaneously expanding the music and entertainment catalogue to attract a wider and more diverse audience, ultimately reducing over-reliance on a single content category.

How Has Viewership Grown Over Time



Viewership remained relatively steady between January and mid-March 2016, averaging between 100 and 300 daily sessions. However, a dramatic spike occurred at the end of March 2016, reaching nearly 1,000 sessions in a single day, suggesting a major live event, content release, or successful marketing campaign drove a sudden surge in traffic. While this spike is encouraging, the platform must investigate what triggered it and replicate that strategy consistently. Building on these peak moments through planned content events, promotions, and live broadcasts will be key to sustaining and growing viewership beyond isolated spikes.

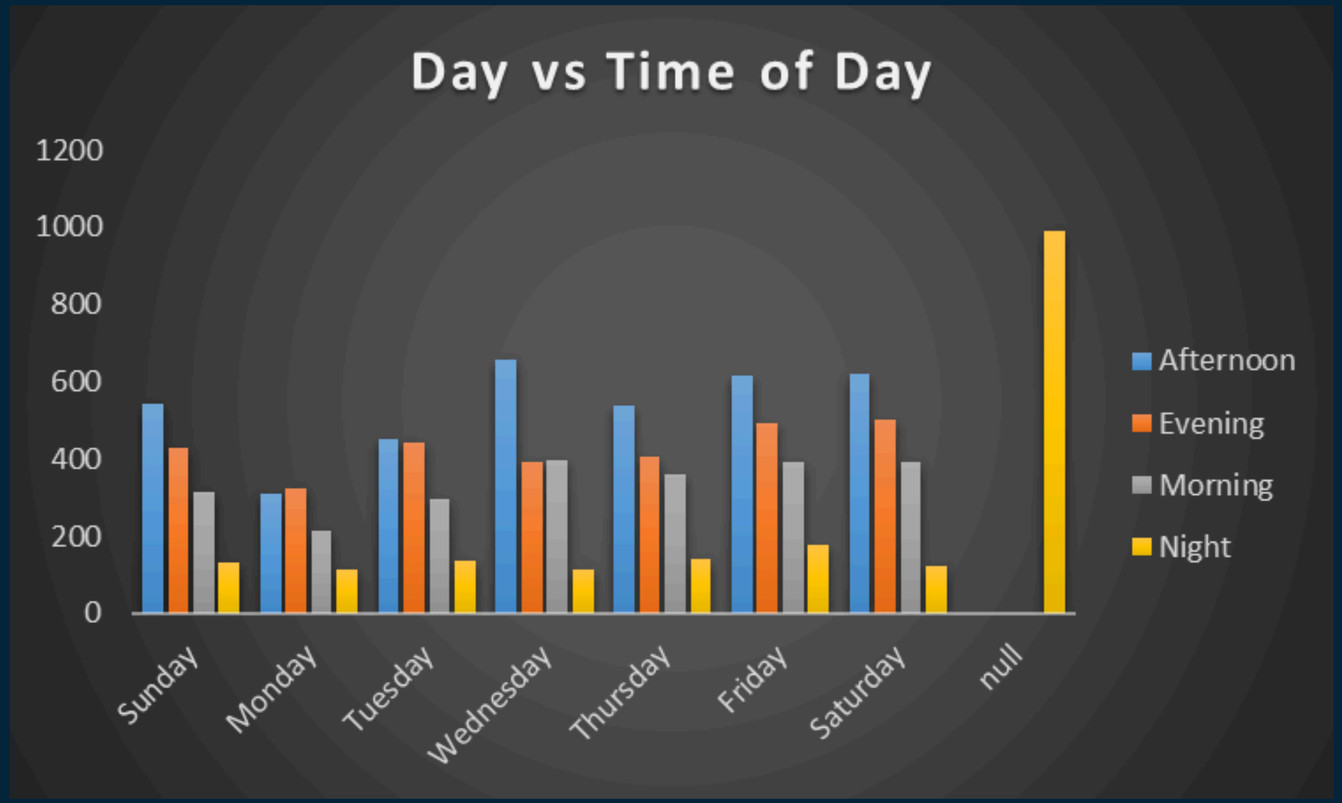
Peak Viewing Days & Times



Afternoon consistently dominates across all days of the week, with Friday and Wednesday recording the highest afternoon sessions. Evenings perform strongly on Fridays and Saturdays, aligning with weekend leisure time, while Mornings and Nights remain the least active periods throughout the week. The "null" spike is a data anomaly that should be cleaned before presenting. The platform should schedule its most premium and high-demand content during Friday and Wednesday afternoons and Friday evenings to capitalise on peak engagement windows, while using morning slots for lighter content such as news, highlights, and catch-up shows to maintain consistent daily traffic.
